Is Church Today?

Our Beau loves church and everything about church. He loves church so much that he often starts his day by asking his mom or me, "Is today church?" Even over the past two weeks, it remains one of his first questions of the day.

Recently I have had to remind him that not only is today "not church," but that it could still be some time until we "have church" again. It has made me sad to see his disappointment upon hearing, "No, church is not today."

I have answered his question this way because I know what he is asking. He is asking if today is when I get to be with my younger friends, talk with (and get treats from) my adult friends, learn Bible stories, and worship God with my songs and prayers. I know that's what he is asking, and that's why I say, "Church is not today."

But the more complete answer for us is that church is today! No, the church is temporarily not meeting together physically, but we remain the church every day. It is often said that we don't go to church; we are the church. The church is not a building or an event. It is us! These times remind us of this powerful truth.

As the church, we seek to live with, like & for the Lord today and every day. Today we depend on God in prayer. Today we love those around us as Christ loves us. In checking on one another and our neighbors, we are the church, the body of Christ. We are the church by sharing what we have with those who are in need. Our absence from the building doesn't keep up from being the church today.

And yes, we continue to be the church by worshiping the Lord. Our worship together right now is structured a bit differently, but we continue to worship as the Lord's church, giving him the praise and devotion he deserves.

Like you, my family and I look forward to when we can be together again. It will be a great day! In the meantime, remember that church is today and every day. Wherever you and I find ourselves, there is church. — Blaine
